Dahlias do well in any good garden soil where they have at least one-half day's direct sunlight. Soil should be well cultivated previous to planting. In planting, the hole should be dug about 6 inches deep, the tuber placed in the hole horizontally with the eye up, then the hole filled about 4". Finish filling as the plant grows. The larger dahlias should be planted 3 to 4 ft. apart; 2½ ft. apart is sufficient for the smaller varieties and pompoms. In cases where extra fertilizer is required, a good dressing of barnyard manure spaded in before planting is sufficient. If commercial fertilizer is used, any good garden fertilizer worked in about the plants when they are about 6" high, and again just when they come into bud, and well soaked in, will suffice. Dahlias require plenty of water, but must not stand in water. When watering, be sure that the water soaks down where it is easily picked up by the roots. A good watering once every ten days or two weeks is better than a sprinkling every two or three days. By disbudding, larger blooms are secured. Dahlias should be taken up in the fall after the tops are killed by frost, cured, and stored in a dry, cool place. A good practice is to store them in boxes of dry sawdust after they are dry.

A good planting rule is, plant dahlias when the trees bud, and gladiolus when the trees leaf.

CLASSIFICATIONS - Types indicated as follows:

C - Cactus	I D - Informal Decorative
S C - Semi-Cactus	F D - Formal Decorative

Varieties marked with (*) are recommended as suitable for cut flowers. All pompoms, miniatures, collarettes, and show or ball type, are naturally cut flower varieties.

THRIP TREATMENT FOR GLADIOLUS.

Bulbs may be treated for thrip and scab by using a solution put up by the Standard Oil Co., called "Super-Germite", and soaking them for four hours, or by treating with corrosive sublimate for 12-16 hours. In using corrosive sublimate, 1 oz. to 8 gallons of water is sufficient. On peeled corms, a 5 to 8 hour dip is satisfactory. On sprouted bulbs, peel and dip not over 4 hours. This dip should be used just before planting.

If thrips survive pre-planting treatments, or migrate into the planting from outside sources, infestation rapidly develops and control measures are necessary. Since the thrips are difficult to find on the foliage, a careful examination of the plants should be made as soon as the first leaves appear above the ground, and if any "silvered" spots are noticed, the plants should be sprayed. Careful spraying, repeated weekly until flowering time, will do much toward insuring a normal crop of flowers. This can be accomplished only if the insects are destroyed before they have an opportunity to enter the buds. If spraying is delayed until the flower spikes appear, little can be done to save the flowers.

Either of the following sprays may be used:

Tartar emetic	-- 2 oz., or $4\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoonfuls
Brown sugar	-- 8 oz., or $1\frac{2}{3}$ cups
Water	-- 3 gallons
or
Paris Green	-- 1 rounded tablespoonful
Brown Sugar	-- 2 pounds
Water	-- 3 gallons

Care must be used in handling the Tartar emetic and the Paris Green as they are both poisons. Spray lightly to avoid harming the foliage.

Glads should be planted in spring about the time the trees leaf. Plant about 5" deep, 5" apart. In the fall, after they are through blooming about six weeks, they may be dug, the tops cut off 1" above the bulb, and then dried. After they are dry, the old roots may be removed. If thrip were present on the flowers, they can be eradicated by storing the bulbs in paper bags or tight boxes after the bulbs are cleaned, with 1 oz. of naphthalene flakes to the 100 bulbs. Leave for about three weeks to a month, and then leave exposed to the air. While using the naphthalene, watch the bulbs so that they do not start sprouting.

All of our bulbs are treated for thrip before shipping.
